
The paper evaluates whether privileged neural temporal information can guide efficient visual inference — while explicitly reporting cases where recognition or robustness preservation is not established.